

Reading for year 1- Wednesday 3rd June.

Remember that non-fiction books often have the following features:

- a front cover with a photograph to show what it is about
- a contents page that tells you what each chapter or page is about
- information divided into different chapters or sections, with a sub-heading at the start of each new one
- a glossary at the end, that explains the meaning of any special words to do with the topic.

If you were going to make an information book about something, what style and subject would you choose?

Would it be ...

a fact file about your favourite footballer?

instructions about how to make your favourite cake?

information about how to grow plants?

When you have decided what it would be about, we would like you to make the front cover of your book with a photograph or picture and a nice clear, title in large lettering.
